HOW TO USE THIS CHART

- Each dish is a Hindivine recipe; the number after it (for example #0123) is its number in the Hindivine Healthy Recipe Series.
- "1 serving" means one serving as described in that recipe; calories and protein are given for the portion shown.
- Items marked + are simple protein add-ons that top up the day's protein.
- Preferred foods used where possible: Millets
- Foods left out: Mushroom, karela
- Drink 2.5-3 litres of water a day unless your doctor has limited fluids.

02 Guidelines for this Plan

DO

- Eat at regular times and do not skip meals, especially if you take insulin or sugar-lowering tablets.
- Eat salad and vegetables first, then protein, then roti or rice.
- Prefer whole grains and millets (jowar, bajra, ragi, brown rice) over white rice and maida.
- Check your blood sugar as your doctor advises and walk 10-15 minutes after meals.

LIMIT OR AVOID

- Sugar, jaggery, honey, sweets, fruit juices and sweetened drinks.
- White rice, maida, bread and potato in large amounts.
- Mangoes, grapes, chikoo and bananas in large portions; prefer guava, apple, orange or papaya.

03 Is 80 g of protein right for me?

A common guide is about 1.0 g of protein per kg of body weight for less active adults, 1.2-1.6 g/kg for active adults and people losing weight, and 1.6-2.0 g/kg for regular strength training. So 80 g a day roughly suits a body weight of about 80 kg if you are less active, 50-67 kg if you are active, or 40-50 kg with regular strength training. Seek advice first if you have kidney or liver disease, or are pregnant or breastfeeding.
